To the manufacturers of space heating appliances for solid fuels

Frankfurt, 25 January 2023

Invitation to an information event for manufacturers on 15 February 2023

Dear Manufacturers, dear Experts, dear Ladies and Gentlemen, on behalf of CEFACD and HKI and in cooperation with SG03WG2, the European group of notified bodies for space heating appliances for solid fuels, we invite you to an information event on type testing and the use of historical data in the new EN 16510 series of standards “Residential solid fuel burning appliances”.

The publication of the parts 1, 2-1, 2-2, 2-3, 2-4 and 2-6 of the EN 16510 series by CEN (and DIN) has already taken place. We expect harmonisation by the European Commission and publication in the Official Journal of the European Community within the first half of this year.

This will be followed by a transitional period (set by the European Commission) during which appliances that have been type-tested according to the old standards such as EN 13240 and also according to the new standards of the EN 16510 series can be placed on the market. After the end of the transition period, the appliances must be placed on the market according to the new EN 16510 series.

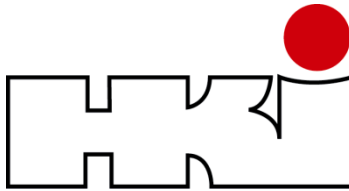

At the information event on the use of historical data, we will inform you about the standards and the rewriting or new preparation of a test report for residential solid fuel burning appliances according to EN 16510-x:2022.

The notified bodies group has discussed a coordinated procedure to ensure consistent type testing and transition to the new standards and they will participate in the web meeting and be available to answer your questions. The event will take place as an online meeting on 15 February 2023 from 10:00 to 14:00 CET.

Please feel free to forward this information to interested parties!
